Annual Financial Reporting

The System’s investments had a 10.6% time-weighted rate of return in Fiscal Year 2018. The annualized total returns for the past five, ten, and fifteen years are 8.2%, 7.3%, and 8.3%, respectively. The System’s performance, compared to other large pension funds, is in the top 25 percent for the ten-year period ending June 30, 2018. At the end of fiscal Year 2018 assets in the System totaled $10.1 billion.

The beginning of Fiscal Year 2018 appeared to present a favorable backdrop for equity markets with signs such as synchronized global economic growth, accelerated corporate earnings as well as accommodative global monetary policies. Market action did provide investors with generous returns, but long-dormant volatility re-emerged as the period progressed. Although equity markets reacted favorably to the passage of the Tax Reform and Jobs Act in late 2017, worries began to emerge in January that faster economic growth may lead to higher inflation and forced the Federal Reserve to pursue a more aggressive pace of monetary tightening. Given a strengthened economy, unemployment rate fell to its lowest levels since 2000 and earnings growth jumped in early 2018.

Returns for fixed income however were challenged by interest rates that moved higher than anticipated over the fiscal year; shorter-term yields moved up more than longer-term yields. As a result, the yield curve flattened and the difference between the 2-year and 10-year Treasury yields reached the tightest spread since 2007.

Given the conditions above, the System’s investments were positioned to benefit from market gains, with an over-weighted exposure to public and private equities, while the System was under-weighted in fixed income where holdings were more focused on credit and investments more sensitive to inflation and higher rates.

The outlook for Fiscal Year 2019 is that the global economy is healthy but will face more challenges. The economic expansion that began in mid-2009 is now nine years old and there are signs that the US economy is transitioning to later stages of the economic cycle. The Federal Reserve is moving towards tighter economic monetary policy, interest rates are moving higher and addition of fiscal stimulus to an economy near full capacity may push inflation higher. Global economies on the other hand are likely in earlier economic cycles; their central banks have signaled the use of less accommodative monetary policies. The escalating trade conflict between the US and its trading partners is a threat to global growth, while political developments in Washington and abroad are likely to be a source of uncertainty.

In the face of these uncertainties, the System’s Board of Trustees and Investment Committee will continue to rely on the investment principles and risk management guidelines that have served the Pension System well in the past and to do their best to execute a sound investment strategy for the benefit of the System’s stakeholders.

As a member of a DPERS pension plan, you participate in a defined benefit plan and your retirement benefits are paid out to you regardless of market events. When you retired, DPERS calculated your monthly pension benefit based on various factors such as years of service and salary, not investment results. DPERS takes responsibility for the management and investment of the trust fund and understands that markets will fluctuate.
